To: Dr. Allison Macfarlane

As Chair of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Commission you are required to enforce the safety regulations of the nuclear plants in this country. The San Onofre plant (SONGS) in California has the worst record of safety violations in the country. I live within the 50 mile radius of that plant -- as do some 8 million other people. We demand you do your duty and take action against the Southern California Edison (SCE) management who have lied about knowledge of defects in their retrofitting of units #2 and #3 and threaten a restart of a dysfunctional unit. This "experimental" restart could have devastating results not only to people but to the land, ocean, economics and flora and fauna of the entire region.

Adjudicated public hearings should be scheduled immediately. This request has been made by many. Now is the time to move forward on this urgent request.

Sincerely,

Peggy Barnes Budd

I'm writing to let you know we expect you to demand San Onofre be closed. SCE has not told the truth about the reactor changes (not like-for-like) and we're anxious about what else has been told to us that isn't true.

I'm not willing to put my family/community/state at risk because SCE wants to 'try' to run the plant at 70%... that's just crazy! If the experiment doesn't work, we are at grave risk to have our environment uninhabitable for eons! The risk is not worth the benefit! We already have storage of spent fuel sitting here - and certainly don't need to add to the stack!

Anxious to hear you've made a sane choice...

To the Attention of the Chairman of the NRC,

In Considering the overwhelming amount of public outcry justifiably so concerning the negative facts concerning restarting the San Onofre plant. It is the opinion of many that thinking of any restart would be considered the ravings of a unbalanced mind. Can you imagine after all the press we have had on this with the horrors of Fukishima still fresh in the publics memory what would happen if ANY incident were to occur?

Sincerely,

Karl Green
